There are two or three questions w should like to ask the Colonel in connection with such remarks as he is thus credited with making at Milford :

First. Will be explain how it has hap pened that up to this day there remains several millions of National Bank Circulation within the limits of the law that the West might have drawn, but which

Second. Not only that, but will he ex plain how it has happened that Western Banks (two in West Virginia for instance) have actually returned their cir culation to the government and gone to banking under the State laws?

Besides, he published a work, on the administration of Church descipling which is a recognised text-book among Mothodist, ministers, and also a volume of sermons, which has taken high posi-Third. According to the Cleveland Lander vesterday, there is evidence that the Beecher-Tilton-Moulton wrangle, so far from being at an end, is simply slumber ing preparatory to a fresh and probably still flercer and nastier outbreak than any of the foregoing. Mr. Beecher at his mountain retrest is represented as outwardly cheerful and happy, but to his intimate friends he reveals great anxiety not so much for what may happen in the future as for the effect upon public opinion of him, of what has already happened. Notwithstanding the enthusiastic support of his congregation and the agreement of a majority of the leading newspapers, secucessfully answers all the charges hitherto brought against him, the knowledge that still regard his case very serious, has naturally a marked effect upon Mr. Beecher's personal happiness. Meantime Moulton, under the advice and coaching of Ben Butler, is working hard on his new and more elaborate statement which, however, will not probably be made public until Mr. Beecher's lawyers have filed their-response to Tilton's have filed their response to Tillon's notice of action. This again shows Butler's handiwork. He does not wish Moulton to unmask his position until Mr. Beecher's party has delivered its Mr. Beecher's party has delivered its fire. Tilton, meanwhile, is reported busy on a new statement, to be published nearly or quite simultaneously with Moulton's, in which he promises to point ou several persons from whom the Plymouth Church Committee might have derived conclusive evidence of Mr. Beecher's guilt, but whom the committee neglected to summon. Tilton has been having an interview with Mrs. Cady Stanton, who will be brought again upon the scene The chances are, therefore, that the scandal will drag its slow length along

If there was no other evidence than the speeches of Brigham Young himself to show the degraded character of his followers in Utah, they would be amply sufficient. This was accepted, and Messrs.

Talcott, Alexander and Forrest waited on the municipal officers and escorted them on board at 2 o'clock, where they were received and entertained at lunch, and afterwards shown over the vessel. ed hours within a stones throw of this temple of justice, and was permitted by the Hherifi of your county who had in his possession a bench warrant for murder which they examined in all its parts with great interest.

In the evening the Peking was gaily decorated and hung with lanterns, and a brass band from the eity and a number of vocalists came on board and contributed to the evening's entertainment. The crowd of visitors was hardly diminished at 11 o'clock, and the reception will continue until midnight. Among the distinguished persons who visited the ship were ex-Mayor Ricc, members of the present City and Common Council, officers of the Charlestown Navy Yard, E. M. Masse and many sojourning officers.

The Bostoniewspapers comment favorably on the visit of the Peking, and the may phase of American enterprise developed by har construction.
